

A woman with dark hair, wearing a grey and white striped t-shirt and light-colored trousers, is pushing a Flymo lawnmower on a green lawn. The mower is grey with a large orange grass collector bag attached to the front. In the background, there is a tall, well-manicured green hedge and various colorful flowers, including purple and red blooms. The scene is brightly lit, suggesting a sunny day.

To cut the grass in 1964 you would have been expected to push a heavy wheeled lawn mower up and down your garden. This inefficient design meant cutting close to the edge of your garden was difficult due to the large, cumbersome design of the modern day lawn mowers. For some, this made gardening an extremely tiring and unpleasant experience.

One man recognised this and took up the challenge to revolutionise gardening for the better. His name was Karl Dahlman. He understood exactly what gardeners wanted; a lightweight easy to move lawn mower that cut the grass right up to the gardens edge.
